This definitive record sets out the essential features and characteristics of the BA (Hons) Screenwriting course. The information provided is accurate for students entering level 4 in the 2025-26 academic year⁵.

Course Summary

The BA (Hons) Screenwriting gives students the opportunity to learn the traditional skills associated with writing for film and television, but also how these skills can be transferred to a variety of digital platforms. Thus, the degree enables students to gain employment in a competitive and ever-changing market, while also pursuing a career in features, if they so wish.

Screenwriting modules mirror industry standard script development processes. Students learn to write and evaluate screenplays by producing documents such as step-outlines, treatments, screenplays, premises, synopses and script reports. Workshop classes are small in size so that students receive script feedback on a weekly and bi-monthly basis. This emphasis on the production of creative work, coupled with regular feedback and one-to-one tutorials, enables students to develop their work more effectively and graduate with a diverse and well-honed portfolio of writing.

As the digital era has progressed, there has been a shift in the definition of screenwriting. We now live in a primarily visual culture, where narratives and content are in great demand across a variety of platforms. Consequently, a skillset that used to be niche to cinema and television is now being demanded by employers in a wide range of sectors. There is still a great need for 'traditional content' (i.e. for film and television), but there is also demand for digital content in a variety of forms, from webisodes and online games to interactive content for marketing and advertising and corporate communication.

The broad set of transferable skills students acquire on BA (Hons) Screenwriting will enable them to work in a variety of roles such as screenwriter, digital marketing content copywriter, script researcher, script editor, storyliner, producer, advertising account executive, market researcher, teacher, cinema manager and film critic.

Course Aims

The course aims have been derived from the QAA Revised Benchmark Statements for Communication, Film, Media and Cultural Studies (2024) and English (2023), and the National Association of Writers in Education (NAWE) Creative Writing Subject Benchmark Statement (2018).

1. Offer an integrated approach to theoretical, critical, practical and creative work in film, television and screenwriting, relevant to students' futures in work or further study
2. Provide students with the knowledge and skills required for employment, both within the film, television and radio industries, and general graduate level employment
3. Engage critically with the analysis, theory and history of film and television in ways which complement, inform and underpin the writing of screenplays
4. Develop the practical, critical and conceptual skills involved in the writing of screenplays
5. Provide opportunities to initiate, negotiate, deliver and reflect upon independent research, including critical and creative projects
6. Develop a range of subject-specific and generic skills to facilitate the continuing growth of professional and personal identities and the capacity for lifelong learning

Course Delivery

The course is delivered at Ipswich. Students studying full-time on the BA (Hons) Screenwriting degree are likely to have approximately 15 tutor structured learning hours for level 4, 12 tutor structured learning hours for level 5 and 9 tutor structured learning hours for level 6. Tutor structured learning will be a mix of lecture, seminar, workshop, tutorial, group and peer critiques. Placements are non-mandatory and not an assessed part of the curriculum. Students are encouraged to engage with work placement and internship opportunities to enhance their experience. The course team will provide support and guidance to students in finding such opportunities. Students will normally be expected to undertake 25 (level four) to 31 (level six) hours of independent study in an average week but should be prepared for this to vary based on assignment deadlines and class exercises.

Course Assessment

A variety of assessments will be used on the course to enable students to experience and adapt to different assessment styles. The assessment methods used will be appropriate to assess each module's intended learning outcomes. Assessment on the course overall will be just under 100% coursework (including essays, case studies, practical scriptwriting work, presentations, group work, reflective learning journals/feedback portfolios and research projects). There is only one module where there are short in-class tests.

Course Team

The academic staff delivering this course are drawn from a team that includes teaching specialists and current practitioners. All staff are qualified in their subjects with their own specialist knowledge to contribute.
